ACUTE BACTERIAL SINUSITIS

Acute bacterial sinusitis is a bacterial infection of the paranasal sinuses where one or more of these sinuses are inflamed. Approximately 3 million people visit their physician each year with symptoms that suggest sinusitis but not all have a bacterial infection or need a prescription for an antibiotic. The current available diagnostic and treatment strategies for this disorder can generate substantial costs with uncertain benefits. AHRQ has recently funded a study to determine how using certain clinical criteria can help treat acute bacterial sinusitis most cost-effectively in clinical settings.

NATIONAL COMORBIDITY SURVEY

The National Comorbidity Survey (NCS) was a Congressionally mandated survey of psychiatric disorders designed to produce data on the prevalence, causes, and consequences of psychiatric morbidity and comorbidity in the U.S. It was the first U.S. survey to administer a structured psychiatric interview to a nationally representative sample of the general population. The NCS collected data from 8098 respondents aged 15-54 between September 1990 and February 1992. The majority of the funding for this survey was provided by NIMH.

ORGAN DONATION

The HHS Secretary's "Donation Initiative" which was recently unveiled consists of 5 elements intended to support public education to increase organ/tissue donation and donation-enhancing activities. The elements include: the workplace partnership for life, a newly designed donor card, the national gift of life medal, driver's education, and a national forum on donor registries. The Division of Transplantation, HRSA will organize a national forum on the potential of registries and create guidelines for registry development.

TEEN SMOKING AND DEPRESSION

Adolescent depression combined with a high receptivity to tobacco advertising is a major factor in determining whether a teen smokes cigarettes. Teens with elevated levels of depression find tobacco ads more appealing than those teens who do not suffer from depression. In addition, adolescents with a high receptivity to tobacco ads are more likely to smoke compared to those with low receptivity. The results are further affected by depression. This research on adolescent smoking and depression has been funded by NIDA.

TUBERCULOSIS

Tuberculosis (TB) is an airborne infection caused by the bacteria, Mycobacterium Tuberculosis. The bacteria can attack any part of the body but usually attacks the lungs. One-third of the world population is infected with this disease and approximately 2 million die each year even though TB is highly treatable with antibiotics. NCHS has published data on TB in their annual publication, Health, United States, 2001.
